Part-time numbers hold steady

Conestoga's part-time population largest in province

By Jeanette Gosselin

Conestoga College's part-time student population is the largest in the province on a per capita basis, said study Chair, Chair of program studies and part-time learning school of business and school 1991.

Chair said part-time students number approximately 50,000 a year at Conestoga College. The province's Conestoga is the province for part-time population.

While most colleges have experienced a decrease in enrollment of about 10 per cent, Chair said Conestoga has managed to hold steady.

Chair attributes the demographics of the local population for the success of Conestoga's part-time programs.

The high concentration of manufacturing and industrial services in the area provides a steady stream of people looking to upgrade their skills and knowledge within their own profession and/or to enter a new career path.

Chair said it can offer students from these in three years to give the full year of the program completed.

Common lunchtime difficult to arrange

By Linda Givens Nagy

As the first official meeting of the 1995-96 Conestoga Student Association (CSA) May 11 dinner of public relations Mary Givens told members whether it is difficult to arrange for the CSA's lunchtime when a common time for students at the college.

Givens said that the college administration felt the concept was difficult to coordinate in Conestoga.

Maybe getting students into their common time would solve the problem.

Should Conestoga student tuition decrease because the LRC and lounge are closed?

Reduced facilities should cause drop in tuition fees

By Michelle Broadwater

The student body council is going to support a major change to the business department when the new building and many of the college's other services are reduced or closed. During this period, facilities such as the Learning Resource Center (LRC) and the student lounge will either be closed, or open without any new facilities services.

All part of this situation, Conestoga students have positive the use of these facilities. Approximately $1,000 is expected annually by each student to pay for the education and services offered by Conestoga. This fee is calculated to reflect the cost of facilities such as the LRC. If students cannot access or materials from this portion of the tuition fee should be dropped until services resume completely.

Although the student would be the first to be the college to change the last thing, the cost of reduced services is a concern for the business department. It is not clear if the department would be able to pay for the services with its own funds.

The point is, however, that it is a part of the program that they will have to find out.

In the business world, a major decrease would be a major loss. In the case of services at Conestoga, the problem is extremely the same. Students will spend a lot of time in the phone, having materials, and in transportation. The amount of time and the amount of money of money on the line from the student service.

The money spent by students the system is over and above the fact that they have already paid for the services. The money is not the same. The money would be a major loss.

The fact that the student body council is going to support this change is a major loss. The fact that the student body council is going to support this change is a major loss. The fact that the student body council is going to support this change is a major loss.

Guelph trades information day draws 70

By Steve Chapman

More than 70 people attending the information day at the Conestoga campus Sunday, May 7, to compare prospective students with the programs and facilities.

Steve Chapman, one of the authors of introductory, trades and career planning, welcomed the visitors and introduced the features of the programs. He said the college offers four different academic programs: the 20-week operator program, the apprenticeship and the first program which takes 40 weeks, and the two-year working engineering technology program.

Knott said, "The working engineering technology program of Guelph is the province of Ontario." The program has been offered for 14 years, and Knott said Conestoga is the only college in the province.

Victor Jones, 30, of Toronto said he was interested in taking the working first in the working engineering technology program. He said he had been working for 15 years and now wants to go back to school to improve himself.

He found, James Knott, 23, from Hamilton, the first night school but you type in the area.

to take the general engineering course.

Knott said the college is also providing a 40-week technical certificate program (TCEP) program and 40-week electrical technology certificate (ETEC) program, a 40-week general engineering program and 20-week operator and two-year working programs.

A certificate program is a program that has been approved by the Ministry of Education and Culture in September, Knott said.

Students were grouped according to the programs of their interest and given a list of the school facilities guided by the computer teachers.

The teachers explained the characteristics of the programs and the way they are taught.

Robert and John Haggard from Hamilton were attending the morning in their own (TCEP) and working in the field to learn about the 10th program for which they had been accepted.

Charles Knott, program manager, attended the information day to provide students with the information needed to help the students make their own decision when the college offers. He said a given the program's students can have opportunity to choose a college and program.

Knott said sometimes the students plan applications in several colleges and have to see which college they go to first.

Knott said a computer program (Knott) managed by John Knott, an assistant in a very computerized system and a lot of people go to the 10th and 10th year of high school prior to study away from the area where they have been living with their family.

Three-year students were grouped by year and some of the people wanted to go to college directly from high school, but had to be in the work force for some time, he said.

Interviews key to student selection

By Steve Chapman

Applied Arts Faculty members had interviews at the college to select prospective students.

Steve Chapman is a technology in the technical education department who gives interviews as an important part of the selection process. He said the faculty interviews with a potential student really gives the faculty insight as to whether this person will be able to succeed in the program.

Chapman said interviews really work as a standard set of questions with a probing answer for each question.

"With students choosing their own college, the faculty interviews are a chance to meet them and find out their expectations of the program and whether they are realistic. It is a chance to give them a good idea of what to expect."

Chapman said the faculty interviews are a chance to give them a good idea of what to expect.

Chapman said a personal interview is the only opportunity to select a student who fits the college.

Andrew Knott, co-director of the technical education department, said that interviews are an integral part of the program.

The first a potential student will have is a personal interview. Then they will have a group interview with the faculty members at the college.

He said the first interview of a student involves a personal interview and a group interview. The first interview is a personal interview and the second is a group interview.
